Parenteral Nutrition Therapy (TPN) in the Home Setting

Soleo Health’s Nutrition Support Program provides exceptional, personalized service and expert nutrition care to patients requiring TPN at home. Our specialized nutrition patient care is implemented from the start:

- Reimbursement experts verify and explain benefits.
- Experienced clinicians provide a smooth transition from hospital to home.
- Nutrition support clinicians provide the recommendations for the TPN formulation and monitoring plan, keeping it simple for the ordering physician.
- Patients are educated in all aspects of therapy, including the intended goals and treatment plan while receiving TPN.
- A multidisciplinary nutrition support team monitors patient status via routine lab review, assessment phone calls and skilled nursing visits, all of which promote success at home, decrease risk of hospital readmission, and result in positive clinical outcomes and patient satisfaction.
- Soleo Health’s Nutrition Program Managers are dedicated to the ongoing TPN education of infusion clinicians, supporting our commitment of excellent patient care.

Medicare TPN Expertise

Soleo’s reimbursement and nutrition teams are experienced in the requirements of Medicare Part B coverage of home TPN. We quickly review medical records to determine if Medicare criteria can be met. If criteria are not met, we will research other coverage the patient may have, and provide any possible alternative guidance for the nutrition care of the patient.

Homestart TPN Program

Soleo’s certified nutrition support clinicians offer the expertise to initiate TPN in the outpatient setting, advocating for hospital avoidance when clinically appropriate. Our clinical team will assess appropriateness, considering risk vs benefit. We can facilitate placement of a central line for central venous access. Our clinical team understands the importance of monitoring and preventing complications like electrolyte and fluid imbalance, as well as refeeding syndrome.
